

Lenses for colour vision deficiency and reading difficulties in optometric practice

David Harris

References

1. Shevell SK (2003). The Science of Colour. 2nd Ed. Elsevier Science Ltd
2. Zeltzer HI (1971). The X-Chrom lens. J Am Optom Assoc 42; 933-939
3. Harris DA (1997). Colouring sight: a study of contact lens fittings with colour-enhancing lens. Optician 213; 38-41
4. The British Dyslexia Association (2008). The incidence of dyslexia. Dyslexia Research Information; available at: <http://www.bdadyslexia.org.uk/research.html>
5. Zabell C, Everatt J (2002). Surface and phonological subtypes of adult developmental dyslexia. Dyslexia 8; 160-177
6. Meares O (1980). Figure/ground, brightness contrast and reading disabilities. Visible Lang 14; 13-29
7. Harris DA, MacRow-Hill SJ (1998). Interim report on the use of ChromaGen contact lenses in patients with specific learning difficulties. Optometry Today 38; 24-25
8. Wilkins A, Evans BJW, Brown JA, Busby AE, Wingfield AE, Jeans RJ, Bald J. (1994) Double-masked placebo-controlled trial of precision filters in children who use coloured overlays. Ophthal Physiol Opt 14; 365-370
9. Wilkins AJ, Nimmo Smith MI, Jansons J (1992). A colorimeter for the intuitive manipulation of hue and saturation and its application in the study of perceptual distortion. Ophthal Physiol Opt 12; 381-385
10. Stein, J.F. and Talcott. J.B. (1999). Impaired neuronal timing in developmental dyslexia - The Magnocellular hypothesis. Dyslexia 5, 59-78.
11. Harris DA, MacRow-Hill SJ (1999). Application of ChromaGem haploscopic lenses to patients with dyslexia: a double masked, placebo-controlled trial. J Am Optom Assoc 70; 629-640

12. Read JCA, Cumming BG (2005). The stroboscopic Pulfrich effect is not evidence for the joint encoding of motion and depth. J Vision 5; 417-434

13. Nicolson RL, Fawcett AJ, Moss N, Nicolson MK (1999). Early reading intervention can be effective and cost effective. Br J Educ Psychol 69; 47-62